Dear Colleague,

This year is our fourth annual Ad Book Cover Design Competition. Students from all over the Commonwealth submitted design ideas based on this year's theme "Technology in Vocational Education Goes Green" to help us celebrate environmental sustainability within vocational education in the state of Massachusetts.

While many of the designs represented our organization very well, some of the designs really embraced our theme. The choice was a tough one to make, with so many talented students sharing their creativity and imagination through their design skills. We certainly appreciate the time and effort each student put into this competition. This year we received over 75 contest designs. As you can see by the cover design above, we have chosen a design created by Bianca Albano. This design was done for an assignment in her class at Greater New Bedford.

The cover designs done by so many students are just another example of high quality work crafted by the young adults we work with each and every day. We are continually impressed and amazed by all of our students and their contributions to the Massachusetts Vocational Association. We would like to take this opportunity to thank all of those who participated in the competition and encourage even more participation in the future. Look for the Ad Book Cover Design Competition Form to be posted on our website each year.

Again, thank you for participating and sharing work from your talented students.

Sincerely,
